THE ORGANIZATION

Heliae Development Inc., pronounced (HEE-LEE-AYY) was formed by the combination of the Greek words for the sun (Helios), and algae. After being founded in 2008, in its early years the company held operations as a small research and development entity from Arizona State University with their main focus at the time being biofuel production.

After a refinement period in 2012, the company established their current mission: to create sustainable microalgae products and solutions that enhance soil, plant, animal, and human health.

THE PROBLEM

The client was building a new lab and their lab furniture contractor at the time gave them a feeling of price gouging as well as making the client feel that they were a low priority. This led to their new lab having a longer lead time than desired.

The lab furniture contractor at the time would not budge to get their project moving. So the client turned to OnePointe Solutions for help. We were more than happy to take on the project.

THE PROJECT

For the biolab, we designed flex systems with mobile cabinets to go underneath as well as overhead services. We also supplied vinyl chairs to go with the lab benches we designed as well.

With the new biolab, the client was able to run more tests and experiments at a larger scale than they were previously able to do.

The installation for this project took a total of one week.

The client was very happy with the final results, the overall process of the project, and to have the lab furniture installed in such a quick time frame.
